Activities

The Auvergne landscape is varied and beautiful, much of it with national park status. The Combrailles region consists of undulating hills covered in forest, cut through with spectacular rivers and gorges. The altitude rises towards the volcanic peaks – the last volcano erupted some 7000 years ago. To the south of Clermont Ferrand are the evergreen forests and wild crags of the Livradois and sunny plains leading to the south of France. This landscape lends itself to many outdoor activities – skiing and snowboarding, walking and rock climbing, mountain biking, rafting and canoeing, fishing to name a few. The region is steeped in history, dotted with ancient castles and farms. There are plenty of fascinating towns and villages to visit, each with its own character, many with authentic local markets. The buzzy city of Clermont Ferrand is
